

7 key benefits of document automation

1

Increased workflow efficiency

With document automation, you can create a wide range of legal documents in a fraction of the time it previously took, and document lifecycle steps such as approvals and eSignatures will be streamlined and automated.

2

Increased profitability

Since document automation reduces the time it takes to create documents, lawyers are free to work on other matters. More clients = an increase in overall firm profits.

3

Reduced likelihood of errors

When lawyers are forced to create legal documents from scratch, it increases the likelihood of mistakes. Document automation eliminates these concerns, producing document templates that are accurate and consistent.

4

Integration with other technology

Automated data inputs from integrated systems, so your information is only entered in one place and can be easily reused.

5

Retention of firm "know-how"

A lot of brainpower and know-how can be lost when lawyers leave a firm. But, document automation can remedy this since it essentially serves as a continuous repository of firm knowledge.

Bonus: it can help speed up the onboarding of new lawyers at the firm.

6

A better customer experience

Being able to produce customized legal documents quickly provides a better experience and improves client satisfaction and retention.

7

Attract new clients

Today's clients are technologically savvy and expect a lot — and document automation can deliver on these expectations. By offering self-service options for clients to access and create contracts when they need them, they will remember their experience and will likely return to your firm if new legal issues arise.
